

2016 Preliminary Examination
Paper 2 Answer Scheme (25/8/16)

1. What do the words “inextricable part of our DNA” (lines 3 – 4) suggest about our story-telling ability? [1m]
 - Innate/inherent / natural OR
 - Fundamentally important / essential
 - Do not accept inseparable

2. According to paragraph 2, how did the story about the Garden of Eden help to make the ancient Hebrews become “people devoted to God and his commands”? Use your own words as far as possible. [3 m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> When Eve ate the fruit from the Garden of Eden’s tree of knowledge, bringing God’s punishment upon herself and Adam, the image powerfully illustrated the fate that may await anyone who ignores a divine order. OR Old Testament stories do not contain an overtly stated moral. ... values came embedded in powerful tales that invited readers and listeners to draw their own conclusions. It was no coincidence that, steeped in stories like these, the ancient Hebrews emerged as a unified society of people devoted to God and his commands 	a) (context) When Eve consumed the fruit, she incurred God’s wrath and suffered severe consequences b) The Hebrews realise they may face the same consequences if they disobey God OR The story allows the Hebrews to come up with their own interpretations c) [inferred] This makes them fearful of doing so / makes them blindly obey God.

1 mark each

3. Using your own words as far as possible, explain why it is “still natural” (line 20) for people to identify with heroes in epic stories? [2m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Though the characters in these epics were larger-than-life figures, often possessed of superhuman abilities, Epic heroes rarely conquered their foes with ease. OR One reason the epics had such staying power was that they instilled values like grit, sacrifice, and selflessness... 	a) Even though these heroes may seem to be godlike / invincible / more capable than ordinary people, b) they actually face similar difficulties / challenges as the rest of us (in achieving success) OR they actually display qualities that we resonate with *Note: Contrast must be captured

1= 1m, 2=2m

4. How does the author illustrate the “staying power” (line 23) of the epics? Use your own words as far as possible. [1m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Generations of Greeks looked to the epics for inspiration OR Homeric emphasis on conquering cities by trickery is mirrored in later Greek battle strategy 	She points out how the Greeks continued to seek guidance from the epics for their lives OR looked to the epics in how they wage wars even though the epics were written a long time ago. *Note: Focus is on the time element Accept any logical interpretation of either point.

5. Explain the author’s use of the word “even” in line 51. [2m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The biggest transformations happen when children actively engage – even empathise – with a particular narrative, recognising how it matters to them. 	She is suggesting that a) the ability to feel for the characters in a story / put oneself in the shoes of a character in a story is b) (inferred) a higher level / less expected / less common response OR to the extent/so much so that c) as compared to mere / basic understanding of the story. *Must refer to children/people: Subject of the sentence is not the power of stories 0 marks if (b) is absent from the answer.

1 – 2 = 1m, 3 = 2m

6. Explain what “bristle” (line 69) tells you about the artists’ attitude towards “the idea that they tell stories to get people to think or act in any particular way”. (2m)

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Bristle In fact, they never write toward a purpose or a moral. / They just hope that readers take whatever they need. (inferred) Narratives that tell us point-blank who we should be, how we should behave, are better described as dictates or propaganda. 	The artists are a) Offended / critical / defensive / angered as *Award BOD for ‘very unhappy’ and ‘indignant’. *Do not accept ‘disagree’. b) they do not set out to deliberately / explicitly instruct people on what to do / the correct / acceptable behaviour/conduct / mindset, OR they do not want to be seen as having an agenda OR they want the readers to draw their own conclusions/think for themselves

1= 1m, 2=2m

7. Why does the author make references to the examples of Foreign Affairs and Hotel Rwanda in paragraph 7? Use your own words as far as possible. [3m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The most enduring stories, broaden our mental and moral outlook without demanding that we hew to a certain standard. '...arresting... ...alternative to the way we see the world' OR (inferred from examples) a meek older woman who shows grit and selflessness after a surprising tragedy or a hotel manager who shelters refugees marked out for death 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> a) It is to illustrate her argument that the stories with long-lasting impact b) are those that widen our worldview / change our worldview OR do not prescribe specific expectations c) by presenting us with engaging/captivating/ gripping stories d) of characters who behave differently from what is normally expected.

1 = 1m, 2-3 = 2m, 4 = 3m

8. Explain in your own words as far as possible what the author means by "It is always up to us whether to turn our backs on a story's landscape or to step into the fresh possibilities it offers" (lines 80 – 81). (2m)

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> It is always up to us Whether to turn our backs on a story's landscape Or to step into the fresh possibilities it offers (context: link to previous paragraph: arresting alternative to the way we see the world) 	He means that <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a) It is our choice/we are free to decide b) whether to not to immerse ourselves in a story, OR reject / ignore the meaning / takeaways of stories *Note: Do not accept 'do not want to read the stories' <ul style="list-style-type: none"> c) accept new interpretations/ideas/ ways of understanding the world

1 -2 = 1m, 3=2m

9. What is the author implying about the impact of stories on people who "decide to venture into an unfamiliar story" (line 81) by her use of the word "revised" in line 82? [1m]

Lifted	Paraphrased
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> "revised" 	It changes people for the better. *Note: do not accept 'acquire new values'.

10. Using material from paragraphs 4-6 only, summarise how stories alter our thinking and the way we engage with the world.

Write your summary in no more than 120 words, not counting the opening words which are printed below. Use your own words as far as possible.

Modern technology has revealed that stories alter our thinking by...

- Para 4: theoretical impact
- Paras 5 and 6: real-world impact

	Lifted	Paraphrased
1	(lines 34-35) begins, as many learning processes do, with mimicry	helping us to imitate others' thoughts and feelings
2	(lines 35-36) stories help our brains map that of the storyteller	helping us to sync with / mirror / follow the storyteller's train of thought
3	(line 36) imagine other people's thoughts and emotions.	enabling us to visualise what others experience *This point can be about storytellers or story characters / others in general.
4	(lines 37-38) the stories we absorb seem to shape our thought processes in much the same way lived experience does	in a genuine / authentic manner. OR Stories influence us, just like real-life situations do.
5	(line 38) When research subjects are told moving true stories,	When people hear stories about events in real life which are touching/poignant/heart-warming/ disturbing *Award only if 6 is present *Should not be about stories being told
6	(line 39) ... identified with the stories and characters...	we connect / feel
7	(line 39) ...on a visceral level OR (line 40) The fMRI data showed that emotion-driven responses to stories... OR (line 43) gut-level empathetic response	Instinctively / intuitively for the stories/ characters, *Do not accept 'deeply' and 'strongly'.
8	(lines 40-41) ...started in the brain stem, which governs basic physical functions OR (lines 41-42) (inferred) when we read about a character facing a heart-wrenching situation, it's perfectly natural for our own hearts to pound	which triggers/elicits physical reactions .
9	(lines 43-44) inspire people to behave differently in the real world	This drives / motivates / influences us to change our actions
10	(lines 46-47) (inferred) all the other stories that have changed our perception in the interim	This effect is gradual as other stories alter our worldview in the process OR This effect is cumulative
11	(lines 48-49) Every story is the beginning of a conversation, with ourselves	Stories trigger / spark / generate/ are catalysts for
12	(lines 48-49) a conversation ...with others	debates/dialogue/discussion (with others),
13	(lines 47-48) (inferred) We argue with stories... We talk back .	critical thinking / making us question ideas,

		*This point is about the intellect. *Do not accept literal paraphrasing e.g. 'we chat/exchange ideas with stories'
14	(line 48) (inferred) We praise .	training us to know what is desirable .
15	(line 48) (inferred) We denounce .	or objectionable OR or should be criticised / condemned . *Context for 13-15 must be about stories' impact, not just our actions in general (e.g. 'We applaud other people')
16	(line 50) (inferred) exactly what educators are counting on to unleash stories' change-creating potential	Stories are thus powerful teaching / classroom tools. *The context of education must be given.
17	(line 51) when children actively engage	When students / children understand a story , *Award only if 19 is present
18	(lines 51-52) – even empathise – with a particular narrative,	and feel for / put themselves in the shoes of the characters, *Award only if 19 is present
19	(line 52) recognising how it matters to them OR (lines 57-58) they are also thinking about similar matters closer to home	they gain insights that are relevant / can be applied to their own experience . OR They realise the story characters are just like them/not that different
20	(lines 59-60) their thoughts and choices shift measurably	They change their actions significantly / greatly / noticeably . *Award only if the degree of change is captured.
21	(line 60) show more empathy and concern for others	Compassion increases / They care more about people around them *Must capture increase *Award BOD for 'they become better people'
22	(lines 60-61) more likely to intervene when other students are bullied	and there is a higher chance that they would protect / stand up for others
23	(lines 62-64) (inferred) Depressed people often cling to long-established internal narratives with refrains like 'I'm not good enough to achieve much.'	Some stories which we tell ourselves reinforce undesirable / negative mindsets OR do not help us to change for the better
24	(line 66) some enthralling inner narratives can damage mental horizons	Some captivating stories can actually destroy our worldview / paradigm / way of looking at the world. OR brainwash us / be counterproductive .
25	(line 65) these are stagnant inner monologues which should be discarded	so they need to be replaced / thrown out
26	(lines 65-66) and substituted with fresh ones	with more helpful / beneficial self-beliefs / thought patterns *'Fresh ones' must be contextualised. *Award one point if 23-26 are collapsed as 'Stories influence us in a good or bad way'.

Points	Marks
15+	8
13-14	7
11-12	6
9-10	5
7-8	4
5-6	3
3-4	2
1-2	1

Modern technology has revealed that stories alter our thinking by (1) allowing us to imitate others' thoughts and feelings (2) through following the storyteller's train of thought. (6) We connect with stories and characters and feel for them (4) instinctively, (5) especially when the stories are touching and real. (9) This motivates us to change our actions. (10) This effect is gradual as other stories alter our worldview. (11) Stories generate (12) discussion and (13) critical thinking, (14) and train us to discern what is desirable (15) or objectionable. (16) Stories are powerful teaching tools. (17) When children are immersed in stories, (19) they gain insights that are relevant to them, (20) which changes them significantly. (21) Compassion increases, (22) and more will stand up for others. (23) Some stories which we tell ourselves reinforce undesirable mindsets, (24) so they need to be replaced (25) with more helpful thought patterns.

119 words, 21 points

11. Svoboda makes a number of observations about the power of stories. How applicable do you find her observations to you and your society?

	References	Brainstorm/Considerations
1	While the Old Testament certainly reflected the values and priorities of the culture from which it emerged, those values came embedded in powerful tales that invited readers and listeners to draw their own conclusions.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Are we really drawing our own conclusions? Isn't laid bare for all to see, natural inference/deduction • Is it really possible to present different interpretations? Is there ambiguity? • We have been institutionalised/socialised since young. Parents will tell us the "moral of the story". Will children question/challenge and believe otherwise? • Just do not like to be told outright/instructed; we prefer to have a choice, or at least the illusion of choice. • We prefer to be persuaded rather than coerced into believing;
2	It was no coincidence that, steeped in stories like these, the ancient Hebrews emerged as a unified society of people devoted to God and his commands.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Are religious teachings embedded in stories still relevant in society? • Refer to the religious books • And include new stories
3	Though the characters in these epics were larger-than-life figures, often possessed of superhuman abilities, it was still natural for people to identify with them. Epic heroes rarely conquered their foes with ease. One reason the epics had such staying power was that they instilled values like grit, sacrifice, and selflessness, especially when young people were exposed to them as a matter of course. In their quest to lead a good life, generations of Greeks looked to the epics for inspiration. ...underscoring the tales' impact not just on minds, but on cultural norms and behaviours.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Similarly, do Singaporeans still identify with these epic characters? • Or do we look up to and are more influenced by contemporary real-life heroes instead of larger-than-life figures in epics? TED Talks? • Or is it a case of both? • Which is more relatable? • Application of lessons learnt from tales in our everyday lives • Badang. Why do some people not identify with the story? Is it because they are not familiar with the story?
4	Our mental response to stories begins, as many learning processes do, with mimicry. In certain essential ways, stories help our brains map that of the storyteller, and imagine other people's thoughts and emotions. What is more, the stories we absorb seem to shape our thought processes in much the same way lived experience does. It is this kind of gut-level empathetic story response that can inspire people to behave differently in the real world	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Media: bring our attention to certain issues; might highlight/sensationalise news through "story-telling" • Do we empathise? Are we influenced? Do we see through their tricks to invoke deep emotional feelings in us? Are we desensitised? • Businesses: building brand and culture through stories
5	Of course, many story messages do not translate into action as neatly as controlled studies might suggest. We respond to The Diary of Anne Frank differently at age 42 than we do at 12, in part because of all the other stories that have changed our perception in the interim. We argue with stories, internally or out loud. We talk back. We praise. We denounce. Every story is the beginning of a conversation, with ourselves as well as with others.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pose questions, find solutions, explore possibilities; Speculation and hypothetical • In a safe environment • Do words translate into feelings and actions? Or they remain lessons in the classroom • Stories connect us to one another? Even though we know they are fiction, stories elicit powerful emotional responses in us. While we are immersed in a story, we can see the world through someone else's eyes. We can know what it's like to be a poor boy in Delhi or a

	Those kinds of conversations, internal and external, are exactly what educators are counting on to unleash stories' change-creating potential. They show more empathy and concern for others, and they are more likely to intervene when other students are bullied.	slave girl in 1700s Virginia or the Queen of England. Sharing our subjective experiences through stories enable us to connect and empathize with one another. By sharing through stories, we are better able to live together. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Really?
6	The stories we tell ourselves are integral to our wellbeing. ... recognise that these are stagnant inner monologues which should be discarded and substituted with fresh ones. Of course, some enthralling inner narratives can damage mental horizons. The most enduring stories, by contrast, broaden our mental and moral outlook without demanding that we hew to a certain standard... they present us with an arresting alternative to the way we see the world.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Inspirational movies • Movies that portray/defy stereotypes • Beyond just speculation about what might happen, we use stories to answer the great unanswerable questions. Why am I here? What is the purpose of my life? What does it mean to be human? Stories bring order and meaning to the chaos and randomness of life. A story always has a beginning, middle and end, which is very satisfying to us, since we don't know how our own personal story will end. And our lives are really a search for our own story, aren't they? • Write our life story, see the possibilities for change
7	And sensibly enough, many artists bristle at the idea that they tell stories to get people to think or act in any particular way. In fact, they never write toward a purpose or moral. They just hope that readers take whatever they need. When stories are at their best, the effect is expansive rather than nakedly persuasive. ... they present us with an arresting alternative to the way we see the world. The success of Adolf Hitler's oratory bid to dominate 1930s Germany should convince us that a narrative's surface persuasiveness is not, in itself, a virtue.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • They might write stories that challenge our minds/perceptions • But are they not bias or do they not write with an intention in mind? • Do they allow for multiple interpretations of their stories? • Stories that lead us to predesignated conclusions? • Double-edged sword? How? How to harness the benefits while keeping the disadvantages at bay?
8	But when we do decide to venture into an unfamiliar story, we emerge as revised, perhaps unexpected, versions of ourselves. Stories allow us to travel, time and again, outside the circumscribed spaces of what we believe and what we think possible. It is these journeys – sometimes tenuous, sometimes exhilarating – that inspire and steel us to navigate uncharted territories in real life.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Suppression of "stories"? Through censorship? • Are we willing to venture; experiment to discover different ways of looking at the same thing